NUMBER 49

Ex-Governor Kirkwood, of Iowa, gives official notice that he will not be a candidate for Congress in his district.

The President has renominated Frank W. Oakley for United States Marshal for the western district of Wisconsin.

It is going the rounds of the press that a Georgia murderer, who was sentenced to be hanged on the 30th of June, asked that the date be changed to the 29th as he didn't want to go out of the world on the same day with Guiteau. The judge kindly acceded to the wishes of the prisoner, but he should have done better—commuted the sentence to imprisonment.

It is reported that ex-Governor C. C. Washburn is dying at Arkansas Springs, of paralysis. There is no public man in Wisconsin, whose death would be more deeply mourned than that of C. C. Washburn. He is not only among the ablest of our public men, but, he has been more liberal in his giving, and more public spirited, than any man in Wisconsin. For these reasons his death will be deeply mourned.

The long neglected grave of Thomas Jefferson, at Monticello, Virginia, is at last being practically remembered, and the work of erecting a monument thereon will be commenced in a few days. Congress has appropriated $10,000 for the purpose, and the Secretary of War has ordered Colonel Casey to superintend the details. The monument is to be of granite, fourteen feet high, inclosed by an iron fence.

The State Journal says that Mr. D. R. Jones, superintending architect of the capitol extension, states that the plans would probably all be completed by the latter part of next week, and that then advertisements for bids would immediately be made, which has to be continued for twenty days. At the expiration of that time the contracts will be let, and the work soon afterwards commenced and hastened, as fast as possible, to completion.

The indications are that the woman suffrage amendment to the constitution of Nebraska, will be adopted by a large majority. Nearly all the papers in the State are supporting the amendment, and the feeling generally throughout the State is that the experiment of giving women the right to vote on an equality with the men, should be tried. Governor Hoyt, of Wyoming, who was long a resident of Wisconsin, says that much of the political success in that Territory and the excellence of the laws, are due to the power of women at the polls, where they have voted for the past twelve years.

Since Rebel General Chalmers has been kicked out of Congress, he has grown intensely mad, and threatens to be a determined foe to the Lamar Democracy of Mississippi. In the New Orleans Times-Democrat, he prints an address in which he declares himself an independent candidate for Congress. "He is particularly severe on those Northern Democrats in Congress who allowed him, he says, to be ousted from his seat without making a fight. His platform includes opposition to national banks, a tariff for revenue only, an elective judiciary, and the lowlands of the Mississippi from overflow. If he retires from the campaign he will support the opposition candidate against the Democratic nominee."

The Chicago Journal asks: "What means the delay in the Senate of the confirmation of Miss Ada C. Sweet as Pension Agent at Chicago? It is hinted that certain politicians in and out of Congress are purposely staying off action by the Senate, hoping by pressure to cause the withdrawal of her nomination." It can hardly be possible that her confirmation will be defeated or that the President will be influenced to withdraw the nomination. Miss Sweet has filled the office for several years, and there is not one politician who will have the boldness to say that she has not filled it well. If she suffers defeat at last, it will be because she is a woman. But the Senate for decency sake will not dare to vote against confirmation, and the President cannot be tempted to withdraw the nomination.

NEW SUPREME COURT ORDERS.
The following orders were made by the Supreme Court, May 10th, 1882:

I.
Rule XVIII is amended to read as follows: "Before the calling of a calendar case, the plaintiff in error or appellant shall file with the clerk eight copies of the printed case, and each party eight copies of his printed brief. The clerk shall deliver one copy of each to each of the justices, to the reporter, and to the State librarian."

II.
Ordered, That the clerk be directed to permit the State Librarian to take from the files the printed cases and briefs in all cases heretofore determined, and that the Librarian cause the same to be bound in volumes of convenient size, properly numbered or lettered, in the order in which the cases were determined. When so bound, the volumes will be deposited with the clerk. Chapter 233, Laws of 1882.

III.
The call of cases on the next calendar, for argument, will not commence before August 25th, next.

Dated May 10, 1882.

CLARENCE KELLOGG, Clerk.

"Four on Oil."
L. P. Follett, Marion, O., states that he has used Thomas' Electric Oil for burns, and has found nothing to equal it in soothing the pain and giving relief.

THE FATAL WIND.

Horrible Results of the Cyclone at McAllister, Tex.—Twenty-one People Killed.

DALLAS, May 10.—News from the McAllister cyclone says the deaths added to those killed outright increase the fatalities to twenty-one up to tonight. Forty-two more are wounded, but it is not thought fatally. Half the killed and wounded are women and children. All possible aid from physicians, nurses, etc., is being rendered the sufferers.

Fifty-nine houses were totally demolished and twenty-seven partially. Settlements Nos. 5 and 7 of the Osage Mining company were the ones visited. They had contained about 400 people. No. 5 was entirely wiped out. No. 7 received only the partial force of the storm. The mines were only slightly damaged, and will be working again next week. Relief subscriptions are being taken up at different points. A mass meeting to-night at Denison realized several hundred dollars.

At Paris, Texas, great damage was done to property. Joseph Hill, a farmer, was killed by lightning. Your correspondent was given the following description to-night by a survivor of the McAllister storm: Two horribly black-looking clouds, one from the southeast and one from the southwest, came with a rush and met at camp No. 5. An appalling elemental carnage ensued there. The two clouds appeared to rend and to tear each other like wild beasts. A continuous flash of binding sheet lightning made the scene brighter than day for over an hour. Above the wild roar of the wind could occasionally be heard the shrieks of dying men, women, and children, and when the storm subsided no aid was at hand, and none nearer than three miles away from the railroad station. All was in a state of chaos, and no help could be got until the next morning.

GRAND JURY WORK.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—In the counterfeit $1,000-bond investigation now before the Grand Jury, there is nothing definitely known beyond the fact that bills of indictment have been agreed upon. These will not be publicly announced probably until arrests have been made of the persons indicted. The government agents have had the suspected individuals closely watched during the investigation, and the agents say there is no chance for escape; that the alleged criminals are as securely within their reach as though they were already in prison.

POISONED MEAT.

CANTON, Ohio, May 10.—Joseph Baker, wife and son, and nine boarders, and Paul Field and wife, were prostrated yesterday, and all became seriously ill, showing signs of arsenical poisoning. Upon investigation the trouble was found to have been caused by eating corn beef which had been purchased at a grocery store. All of the sufferers are recovering except Mrs. Baker and two of the boarders, who are in a critical condition. A chemical analysis of the beef and an investigation is being made.

PENNSYLVANIA.

HARRISBURG, May 10.—The Republican State convention met to-day at 11 a. m., but did not get down to work until 3 o'clock p. m., owing to the delay caused by a committee.

General Beaver was nominated for governor, and State Senator Davies for lieutenant governor by acclamation.

For the supreme judgeship six names were placed in nomination, Bawle, of Philadelphia, and Brown, of Pittsburgh, being the most prominent. Two ballots were taken, resulting in Bawle's nomination.

In the contest for Secretary of Internal Affairs State Senator Greer had a walk-over, being nominated on the first ballot. The slate agreed to contained all of the above nominations, and also included ex-State Treasurer Sammel, or, as he is familiarly called "Farmer," Butler for Congressman at large but just previous to taking the vote the name of Thomas M. Marshall was sprung on the convention by the Pittsburgh delegation, and carried through with a rush, thus at the last moment breaking the slate.

EX-GOV. C. C. WASHBURN.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 10.—A private telegram received in this city to-day, from E. B. Washburn, dated at Eureka Springs, Ark., 9:30 p. m. Tuesday, announced that his brother, ex-Governor C. C. Washburn, was dying. Another dated to-day, says the Governor is very low, and unless a great change takes place very soon he cannot last long. A. V. Martin, Mr. Washburn's business partner, who left him two weeks ago, says he was then much improved, and hopeful of ultimate complete recovery. Whether the new prostration is from paralysis is not learned, but it is supposed such is the case.

FROM WEST AFRICA.

How Two Hellens Sacked Seven Troys.

To the Editor.

GABOON, WEST AFRICA, March 18, 1882.—On the Nkama, (pronounced Nlawmaw) one of the continent streams forming the Gaboon river, West Africa, there lived a man called Akiewe. He possessed more money than beauty, and more savageness than amiability, and in those respects was about on a par with Neneaus of old. For about one hundred and fifty dollars each he purchased two wives, of an impecunious or avaricious father, and lived very lovingly with them until his beatings and gashings and burnings could be endured no longer. So not waiting for a kasir to come and entice them away, they took advantage of their lord's absence, and got on board some craft and came down to the government works, and there selected their husbands. After a few months there came a letter to the missionary, asking his good offices, not to join in the bans of matrimony the two hellens, but to persuade the commandant to return the two elopers, or return for each about two hundred articles of trade goods. The two separate lists of articles paid as dowry were sent. The French government having omitted making an appropriation for such a contingency, there was no money in the colonial treasury to meet such an unexpected draft. The commandant also being a merciful man, and having a wife and two children in France, who have since come to meet and live with him in this fiery clime, declined the demand for the sacrifice of the two victims. Besides, the two women with true womanly instinct, anticipated all this, and had contrived to get their husbands (if it be proper to call them such) sent off to a distant station on service.

The answer sent to Kiewe was this, If a man buys moonshine over on Sandy Point, he must go and collect the material himself, or pocket the profit or loss. The bereaved and desolate man (he had only ten wives left) came down and presented the case himself. But like Priam of old, honor and mercy conjoined kept the hellens, and Akiewe returned meditating vengeance. But his fleet of two six paddle canoes would be a forlorn hope against a gun-boat, a guard-ship and a garrison of forty soldiers, armed with practice three hours each day. Kiewe himself had a breach-loader and knew how to use it. Akiewe did not dare touch an English, German or French boat. But an unfortunate Portuguese going up to trade, was gobbled up, and boat and goods taken up a creek to the Pangwe, and the creek barricaded by felling trees across it. The commandant called the coast to some down the coast, not seeing Col. Crockett's rifle, did not come down. The gun-boat went with a roving commission to demand the pirate, or punish somebody. Now it so happened that there was a number of towns around, in which the people spoke the same language as the fugitive, and a greater number speaking a different dialect. Akiewe was doubtless the head man, or ruling spirit in his own town. But not one of his own people was in the affair of robbing the boat, and not one speaking his native dialect. There was also much property in some of these towns belonging to English and German traders. But some body must be punished. The men fearing something, had all fled with all their movables, leaving only women and children. One or two shots sufficed to clean the town, of the humanities, and then proceeded to burn. Bamboo houses are easily burned, and as easily built. So the punishment was not severe on the natives. But what of the foreign property? The Captain of the gunboat was asked if he intended to do anything to the town on Neugeenge. He replied, no, nothing, let your goods remain. The next day the place was burned, with no further notice. Now the question arises, whose is the loss? Akiewe's town was burned also, and much property in it. But the largest amount was on Neugeenge island; where there was also a mission station, and houses; one new and unfinished. These were not burned. But immediately the gunboat leaving, the natives rushed over, and in a short time the houses were pulled down, and all the material carried off. The question comes, Why was Neugeenge burned? There must be a justification. And here comes up a hasty assumption, that was head man of those seven cities that were destroyed, because the people spoke his language, or the people who assisted in robbing the boat spoke the other dialect; so as all were linked together. A man in Buffalo, perhaps the mayor, has committed a great trespass; now we will destroy Buffalo and Toronto, Hamilton, Ontario, because they speak the same language, and that makes mutual responsibility. But this is in Africa. Savage Africa—the Dark Continent. The present generation of Frenchmen are oblivious of the many times they were utterly foiled in all their attempts at negotiation; to get possession of their country, until they tried shot and shells. But the controversy is not now with motives; for at this time the fugitive has delivered himself up, and the questions of loss have been transferred from Gaboon to Paris. But the two Hellens have sacked Paris, and the two Parishes hold their prizes. And they have made a chapter in history.

The Persecution of the Jews.

The Jews have been from all time an exclusive people; pride of race and contempt of the Gentiles round about them distinguished them already in the days when they warred against the Anakites. They sincerely and truly believed that it was not pleasing to Him that His children should act like the peoples round about them. Eighteen centuries of cruel, senseless persecutions, of enforced exclusion from intermixture with other nations, of intermarriage in small communities, have intensified all the distinctive physical and mental features of the Jews, so that not only their good but their bad qualities have become accentuated. Not even the eighteenth century, so ready to toast on its enlightenment, had opened the gates of the Ghetto and accorded civil liberties to a people who, of all peoples, are peace-loving, law-abiding and least likely to abuse these privileges. The gates have now been thrown down, the liberties freely granted, and it is difficult to foretell what the Jew will be a few centuries hence—indeed, if there will be Jews left at all. They are far too assimilated, far too keen-sighted, not to be affected by and to recognize the propensities inherent in the cosmopolitan tendencies of the present day. For ourselves, we have no faith in the schemes of enthusiasts portrayed by Daniel Deronda and his friend Mordecai, in the national restoration of the Jewish people, and feel convinced that, were the attempt made, it would result in a mere exodus of the scum of the population. What has distinguished the Jewish people and kept them a nation so long is the fact that their nationality is not rooted in the land from which they have so long been absent, but in the law, which they can bear about with them everywhere. The Jews are at present in a transitional state. It is commonly said it takes three generations to make a gentleman. It must certainly take as long to obliterate all the cruel memories of Christian oppression that linger among those whose grandfathers remember the pressure of disabling laws.—Exchange.

Ingersoll on Beaconsfield.

Col. Ingersoll, in speaking of Lord Beaconsfield as a glutton, says: "Most of his characters are like himself—puppets moved by the string of self-interest. The men are adroit, the women mostly heartless. They catch each other with false bait. They have great worldly wisdom. The virtue and vice are mechanical. They have hearts like clocks—filled with wheels and springs. The other hands then up. In his novels, Disraeli allows us to enter the green room of his heart. We see the ropes, the pulleys and the old masks. In all things, in politics and in literature, he was cold, cunning, accurate and successful. His books will, in a little while, follow their author to the grave."

Wasn't it rough on Ella, just as she was telling Frederick, at lunch, how ethereal her appetite was, to have the cook bawl out, "Say, will ye have yer pork and beans now, or wait till yer feller's gone?"

The Average Russian.

As for the Russians being "barbarians," and to a great extent incurably barbarous, that is a position susceptible of a great deal of argument from many different points of view. The most familiar, most of capitandum, and perhaps the most unjust theory is that even the better educated and refined of Russians are at the very best only coated with a thin veneer of civilization. The great master of cynical terseness in expression, Prince Bismarck, has lent the immense weight of his celebrity and his reputation for far-reaching sagacity in judging the characters of mankind to the "veneer" and "barbarian" hypothesis in his famous discourse. "The Russian is a capital fellow till he tucks his shirt in." To understand the tremendous force of this merciless resume of the Muscovite character one must have lived in Russia. Ivan Ivanovich, the moujik—peasant, droschky driver, mechanic, laborer, or what not—wears his shirt—usually a red cotton one—outside his other garments. All those familiar with Russian humanity know Ivan Ivanovich to be, on the whole, a "capital fellow." He is frank, brave, generous, affectionate and docile. He is a fervent devotee of the greasy idolatrous rights of the Russo-Greek Church which some Anglican Ritualists are insane enough to think can, without much difficulty, be brought into communion with the Church of England. He is grossly ignorant; but he has the utmost reverence for the offices of the church, and does not think the worse of his pope or priest when, in his village, he is occasionally called upon to assist in carrying home from the dramsop the ecclesiastical, dead drunk, or a stretcher. Ivan himself gets tipsy whenever he has the chance of doing so, but he is the best natured of souls, and too much beer or vodka scarcely ever makes him riotous or pugnacious. Inebriety rather incites him to the shedding of maudlin tears, or to an excess of piety in exhortations to the right and left in order to exorcise the devil.

Truthful he can scarcely be said to be. He has been too recently a slave to be able to understand the moral culpability of telling a lie, but he is passing honest. He is, in fine, a "good wood," capable of being reasoned to many useful purposes, and he is in particular, industrious, patient and submissive. He is not very inventive, but he has a curiously strong imitative faculty, almost Chinese in its concentration and laborious fidelity to the thing to be imitated. Thence he can be taught to be an admirable cabinet-maker, an inlayer, an enameler, a pottery painter, and a worker in metals. Similarly his womankind are the most skillful of embroiderers. He is very domesticated, and very fond of his children, although he occasionally thrashes his wife. Of strong liquor, as I have hinted, he is passionately fond; otherwise he is content to live on the simplest and coarsest fare. White bread he seldom tastes; "brick tea" is, after corn brandy, his favorite beverage; half-pickled cucumbers, or dwarf cucumbers, enter largely into his diet, and with bad drainage, help to give him typhus and the cholera; and he can sleep anywhere—the top of a stove is his most chosen resting-place—quite indifferent as to bed-places. There is no braver soldier than Ivan Ivanovich when it comes to the pen for the inscription, and cropped and shaven, and put into a hodge-nodge gaderine, with a spiked helmet on his head and a rifle in his hand.—Exchange.

Antidote for Snake Bites.

Under the common name of "Guaco," many plants are known, belonging to different natural families, which have a reputation for curing snake bites. In a recent number of the Pharmaceutical Journal particular attention is drawn to one of these guaco-yielding plants, the Mikania guaco, a composite plant of South America. The paper referred to is the substance of a letter received at the Royal Garden, Kew, from a correspondent at La Salada, New Granada, in which the writer gives his personal testimony as to the value of the remedy, and says that it forms the basis of all the preparations of the snake bite doctors of the district. Notwithstanding that there are several species of snakes in the country whose bite is considered mortal, some killing in a very few hours, it is asserted by the writer of the letter, who has resided in snake-infested regions for many years, that properly and promptly administered, the guaco is a sure cure for the bite of the most venomous. An infusion or tincture of the leaves is used, internally, and hot poultices of the bruised leaves and stem are applied externally.—Nature.

He who tells a lie is not sensible how great a task he undertakes; for he must be forced to invent twenty more to maintain that one.—Pope.

Unlucky People.

A genuinely-unlucky man will entail as much misery upon those who are dependent upon or associated with him as a genuinely-wicked one. They can never be relied upon. Their speculations turn out ill when those of stupider men succeed. Their inventions are just a little anticipated by those they never heard of. Their books or plays do not become popular. Their crops are sure to be injured by the floods or the tornadoes; their vessels to be wrecked or burned; their houses consumed within the twenty-four hours after the insurance policy had expired, or the day before they had resolved to take one out. Judges are sure to rule adversely to their interests; juries always bring in verdicts against them. Their letters are certain to go astray; their baggage or express packages to be lost or stolen. It is they who are always looking for their missing knives, and are constantly wondering where their hats or their umbrellas have gone to. The money they put into their pocketbooks, or the pocketbooks they put into their pockets mysteriously disappear. Even when they desire to be prudent, and, with considerable sacrifice and pains, buy their potatoes, their coal and other stores in advance at reduced rates, the prices of the succeeding winter invariably fall below what they have paid. They are to be dreaded as Jonah was dreaded. The boughs of the trees they climb always break; the boats they row or sail always capsize. The train they take is by no means to be expected at its terminus on time, and even if late, should cause gratitude that it got there at all. Or, if they are not the victims, they are the authors, of all sorts of involuntary mischief. Altogether, shrewd old Rothschild was wise when he counseled his sons to "avoid unlucky men."

Chinese Version of the Prodigal Son.

"A man, he two sons. Son speaker to father; father got money; give some he; father he take it all right. I just now give you half. He gives him half; he go long way—like me come China to New York. No be careful of money, use too much; money all gone; he velly hungry. He went to man, He wanted work, he say; all right; he tell him feeble pigs. He give him pig; he eat with pig himself. He just now take 'My father he rich man—much money. What for me stay here hungry? I want to go back and see my father. I say to him, I velly bad. He knows I bad. Emperor (God) see I bad. No be son, me be coolie. He go back; huge way, father see him. He take him on the neck. Son say, 'I velly bad. I just now be your son. His father take to boy and say, 'Get thee handsome coat; gives he rug, gives he shoes; bring fat cow—kill cow, give him to eat.' They velly glad. He also same dead, just now come back alive; he lost; he get back. Number one son come. He hear music; he tell coolie, 'What for make music?' He say, 'Your brother come back; your father velly glad he no sick; he killed fat cow.' Number one son velly angry. Father he comes out; he say, 'No, no be angry. Number one son say, 'I stay all time by father; never make him angry. My father never kill me fat cow for me. My brother he velly bad; he use money too much; he have fat cow and music.' Father say, 'You no sabee; he just dead; he now comes to life; he lost; now come back.' They make music."

A Yankee Housewife.

A Portland lady has invented a perfectly reliable device for protecting her clothes line from sneak thieves. She hangs her clothes on a reel in plain sight of the street and attaches to it a large dinner bell. Her room is within hearing distance, and if any one is bold enough to attempt to steal the clothes he invariably frightens him so that he makes off at the top of his speed, leaving the line as full as he found it.—Portland (Me.) Advertiser.

What Is Man?

This little life-boat of earth with its noisy crew of mankind, and all their troubled history, will one day have vanished—faded like a cloud-speck from the azure of the sky. What, then, is man? He endures but for an hour, and is crushed before the moth. Yet in the beginning and in the working of a faithful man is there already (as all faith from the beginning gives assurance) a something that pertains not unto this death element of time; that triumphs over time, and is, and will be, when time shall be no more.

A CHICAGO editor got hold of a map, and presently exclaimed: "By tunket, the Mississippi river runs by St. Louis, doesn't it?" And then he wrote a paragraph referring to the Mississippi as a miserable brook.—Boston Globe.

A Nation in Mourning.

The Siamese Nation was recently plunged into mourning by the death of "His Sublime Grandeur the Court and Body Elephant of the King." Says the Indian Herald: "We regret to learn that the animal departed this life in a highly sensational manner, fraught with irreparable disaster to the staff of his household. One morning, after a hearty breakfast, he went mad quite unexpectedly, and trampled five of his attendants to death. To shoot him would have been sacrilege. An attempt to tranquilize his perturbed spirit by encircling him with a huge ring of holy bamboo, specially blessed by the Holy Priest of his own particular temple, proved through the ring and all but fatal to the animal. He was then with great difficulty driven into a close court of the palace, where, after several furious endeavors to batter down the walls with his tusks, he suddenly toppled over on his side, and uttered a last cry of rage. Naturally enough this heavy calamity was attributed to criminal carelessness on the part of one or other of the attendants intrusted with the sacred elephant's feeding. The King thereupon interrogated the members of His Sublime Grandeur's household in respect to the treatment of the illustrious deceased, and failing to elicit any individual confession of delinquency, decreed that they should one and all be punished. Having thus vindicated propriety, his Majesty assumed the garb of woe, and is understood to be still inconsolable for his loss."—New York Tribune.

AN UP-COUNTRY man bought a Roman candle and lighted it to go to bed by. He said you can bet your sweet life he'll look the man that loaded it, if he can find him out.

A Desperate Struggle.

"Halt! Who goes there?" shouted a long, lank Confederate soldier, sitting upon a sorrel horse, toying with a double-barreled shotgun, the favorite weapon of the Western bushwhacker in the early war time. He was the picket guarding the camp of Dick McCann, one of the most daring of the Confederate cavalymen. The bivouac rested in the security of his vigilance in a piece of woods a mile or so to the left of the turnpike leading from Gallatin to Nashville, Tenn. The picket stood where the country road which led past McCann's camp made its junction with the turnpike. He evidently challenged the cavalry approaching from the direction of Gallatin as a matter of form, for as the officer approached him in response to his command, "Advance and give the countersign," his shotgun lay upon his lap, across the pommel of his saddle, while he was paying more attention to the wagon read with two chickens in one hand, the plunder of an unofficial forage, and an unruly horse in the other, than he did in the officer responding to his challenge. The Federal soldier got within a few feet of him before he seemed to recognize the possibility of an enemy being nearer than Nashville. The dress first attracted his attention, for he saw that it was not that of a Confederate, and, hurriedly bringing his shotgun to bear upon the officer, he commanded: "Halt! What regiment do you belong to?"

"To the Fourth Michigan cavalry," replied the officer.

Covering the officer with his shotgun as he passed around to surrender himself, the Confederate again commanded, "Give me your arms!"

The officer, who wore a heavy overcoat with a long cape, dropped the reins upon his horse's neck, pushed his hand under his overcoat to unbackle his saber and comply with the demand.

The Federal soldier's horse being thus left at liberty crowded against that of the Confederate, and, believing his game was already in hand, he laid his shotgun down across his saddle to receive the arms of his captive. Hardly had he done this before the Federal soldier saw his opportunity, and, throwing his left hand quickly under the cover of his cape, struck the muzzle of his shotgun and knocked it to the ground and with the same movement caught the Confederate by his long, flowing hair, pulled his head upon its breast, whipped his revolver from its pouch, placed it against his body and fired. The hammer of the revolver caught in the fold of the long cape which hung from the Confederate's shoulders and did not explode. He drew it back, raised the hammer again, and made another attempt to secure the Confederate. This time it got between his body and arm, and, although it did not miss fire, the muzzle was unimpaired in the tussle. For all this was the work of a minute, for the officer had shouted to his command, "Forward!" the moment he had grappled with one of McCann's private soldiers. But by the time it had arrived the soldier was going down the road at break-neck speed, while his comrade with the two chickens for the morning's breakfast had mounted his horse and was following him hurriedly. The little command passed on to Nashville as rapidly as possible, without stopping to do more than to pick up the soldier's shotgun to send home as a souvenir of the escape.

The Japanese Laborer.

In his own country the frugal Jap lives in a house of no more than four rooms—one for eating, sleeping and sitting, one for cooking, one for bathing and one to spare. He never wears boots and never brings into the house. He and his family sit on the floor when they eat, and take their meals at a low table. The floor of their dining and sitting-room is covered with clean, soft mats, upon which at night cotton comforters are spread to sleep under. Such a house can be built and furnished for $100, and, though cheap and small, is comfortable. The bath, found in almost all laborers' houses, is in daily use. "Better than gold is the water cold."

"It isn't dying," said Mrs. Brown-

smith, "that troubles me. I am not afraid of death; but it makes me sad to think of leaving my friends. I often think what would become of you if I were gone!" "Oh! you needn't let me interfere," replied Brownsmith eagerly; "don't let me stand in your way, darling." And the house took up the question of "Resolved, that Brownsmith is a brute," passed it through its three readings without a dissenting voice, and adjourned precipitately for a real good cry.

Nature Making Mummies.

Says the Phoenix (Arizona Territory) Gazette: "The remark so often made and heard in Arizona about dead bodies drying up and blowing away, received a pretty strong verification at the reinterment of Dan Dietrich. Although death had occurred nearly eight months ago, and the body had been buried only in blankets, every feature was distinct and perfect, and anyone who had known Dan during his lifetime would at once recognize them. The hair appeared to have grown since his death, and still retained its natural color. No unpleasant odor was perceptible, one might easily have supposed he was examining a well-preserved mummy. Since the first internment the body only shrunk and dried up, and no sign of decay could be found save in the region of the stomach, and that was due more to the fact of that portion of the body having been opened during the post-mortem examination than to natural causes. The body had, however, in that time lost over two-thirds of its weight, dwindling from 140 pounds to less than fifty pounds. This remarkable state of preservation in our hot, dry climate and soil is by no means uncommon, as many present could cite similar instances of it."

Breathing Carbonic Acid.

The dangerous properties of carbonic oxide have long been known—an atmosphere which contains only a little of this gas may produce poisoning and death. Some exact experiments on the subject have now been described to the French Academy by M. Grehant. His conclusions that a man, or one of the lower animals, compelled to breathe for half an hour in an atmosphere containing only 1-77th of carbonic oxide absorbs the gas in such quantity that about one-half of the red blood corpuscles combine with the gas and become incapable of absorbing oxygen; in an atmosphere containing 1-1,440th of carbonic oxide about a fourth of the red corpuscles combine with this gas.

BRIDGES.

—The dress drill of the Janesville Guards this evening.

—Chief Engineer Kelly is arranging for a visit to Chicago to-morrow or next day.

—Ald. Cox is putting a coat of paint on his new house on North First street.

—Mr. John Harrington expects to start for Minnesota, to-morrow, on a prospecting tour. He will be absent some time.

—Miss Frankie Whiting, of Janesville, has returned to her home, after a pleasant visit of a week with Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Hanks.—State Journal.

—Stanley B. Smith, President of the Board of Education, started on a pleasure trip to Kansas, today. He will be absent a week or so, and will visit the Southern part of that State.

—Chief Clerk Coe, of the last Wisconsin Assembly, dropped his editorial pen on the Waterway Register, to-day, that he might be present at the wedding of his niece, Miss Cassaday.

—Ex-Alderman L. S. Smith, formerly an engineer on the Northwestern railroad at this point, but now foreman of the pound house and shops of the same road in Green Bay, is in the city, and is welcomed by his many friends.

—The divorce case of Dopp vs. Dopp, from Jefferson county, was concluded last evening in the Circuit Court, and a divorce granted to the plaintiff, and the custody of the child awarded to her. The court then adjourned until Tuesday night.

—A large number of men and boys were having considerable sport this morning catching "bull-heads" in the raceway in front of No. 1 engine house. Many of the fishermen had good luck and succeeded in hauling good numbers from the water. One little boy, in particular, had more than he could carry.

—Russell Angel has a pair of prairie dogs at his house in the Third ward. They burrowed up in the ground last October, and did not make their appearance again until the middle of April. Mr. Angel has had these dogs for two years, and he allows them the full run of his premises, they not offering to stray away.

—Will Davis, the popular liveryman opposite the Pember house, is constantly adding to his already large stock of carriages and buggies. Yesterday he received a new double-seated carriage, which is a beauty. He is doing a good business, and has a pleasing manner in accommodating his customers.

—The Young Ladies Sodality of St. Patrick's church were very successful last night, with their May party at the Kliffes' armory, and all who participated had a very pleasant time. We understand that the net receipts were in the neighborhood of one hundred dollars. Good enough. The Light Guard Band furnished excellent music.

—Mr. C. W. Jackson, after a careful examination of his back and harnesses, and not finding a pole broken or harness damaged, made up his mind that it must have been an error in one stating that one of his back teams had been frightened by an express wagon, and caused the above damage. As stated in last evening's Gazette, the team belonged to Will Davis' livery.

—The residence of Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Selleck, of the Fifth ward, was the scene of a social gathering of young ladies connected with the First Methodist church, last evening. A large party was present, notwithstanding the stormy weather, and a very pleasant evening enjoyed. A bountiful supply of refreshments were served, and all were happy that they had come out in such a night.

—The many friends of Mr. J. J. Cox, familiarly called "Little Jimmy," will be pleased to learn that he has recently been "set up" from a fireman to that of engineer, on the Chicago and Northwestern road. He is now running a locomotive at Escanaba, in the iron ore regions. Mr. Cox has been on the road about three years, is a steady, industrious, and, although small in stature, is "all man." Success to him.

—Frank Barlow, the baggageman on the Fond du Lac accommodation train, brought to the city this morning, a sturgeon, or what is called at Oshkosh, a Fox River minnow, which weighs sixty-five pounds. He presented it to Messrs Zienow & Blunk, on West Milwaukee street, with whom he boards when in Janesville. The sturgeon was on exhibition at Zienow & Blunk's restaurant this forenoon and many of our citizens viewed the same.

Fire Department Officers.

The special meeting of the fire department, at the West side engine house last evening was well attended by the members of the department, and the selection of a chief engineer to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Young, was easily and harmoniously accomplished. Mr. John Kelly, the present first assistant engineer, was selected for the position of chief by acclamation, which is a very high compliment to Mr. Kelly, coming from the men with whom he has been associated in the department for many years. Mr. Kelly is a live, wide-awake man; besides his long experience as an active member of Engine Company No. 1, he has held the office of foreman of that company, in which he was not lacking; at the present time he is serving his second term as first assistant engineer of the department, to which position he was recently elected by acclamation. Mr. Kelly is familiar with the minute details of everything pertaining to the department, and is a good disciplinarian, having served a period of five years in the regular army of the United States. By the promotion of Mr. Kelly, another vacancy was created, that of first assistant, for which position the department selected Mr. James Foster, the present foreman of Engine Company No. 2.

Mr. Foster has been a member of the department for over twelve years; has faithfully discharged the duties of the office of foreman of his company for several years, and is one of the most active and best posted of its members. He has been a first-class officer in his company, and the members are confident in his ability and experience, that he will be equally popular in his new charge.

TAKES THAT KIND.

WHEELLOCK-CASSADAY.

An elegant and joyful wedding was celebrated at eleven o'clock this forenoon at the residence of Judge J. B. Cassaday, the contracting parties being his daughter, or Belle E., and Mr. George H. Wheellock. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. D. F. Davis, pastor of the Congregational church, and was witnessed only by the relatives of the young couple, and some fifty intimate friends of the families. The ceremony was very impressively performed while the groom and the bride stood underneath a floral and evergreen arch. The bride was dressed in her traveling suit. After the ceremony the heartiest congratulations followed, when the company repaired to the feast in the dining hall, where the refreshments were truly choice, well devised and exceedingly well prepared.

Among the persons present from abroad were Mr. and Mrs. Abram Brokaw, of Bloomington, Illinois (Mrs. Brokaw, is a sister of Mrs. James Spalding); Mrs. Jesse Spalding, and daughter, of Chicago; and Hon. E. D. Coe, and wife, of Whitewater.

The groom and bride are well known this city having lived here all their lives, and their circle of friends extends over the entire community. The happy couple left this afternoon for South Bend, Indiana, where Mr. Wheellock will engage in the crockery business with his brother Charles. In their new departure they will carry with them the best wishes of numerous friends.

THE PRESENTS.

Legal Notes.

The opinions of the Supreme Court have been announced, and the following are the decisions in cases appealed from Rock county:

Henry M. Benjamin vs. Dr. George Covert, of Clinton, as a partner with his brother, Augustus, the doctor claiming that he was not a partner. The jury in the circuit court held that he was a partner, when Covert appealed to the Supreme Court, the judgment of the court below being affirmed.

The case of Nevil against Clifford was an action to restrain the collection of a tax to pay for the building of a school house in the town of Magnolia. The Circuit Court declined to restrain the collection of the tax, and on an appeal being taken to the Supreme Court, the judgment was reversed and the case remanded for further proceedings. It was claimed that the contract under which the school house was built, was fraudulently entered into. It was held in the circuit Court that the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The case has not yet been tried on its merits.

Another decision announced by the Supreme Court is of considerable importance though the action was not commenced in this county. It was the case of Williams against Williams, and the question involved was as to whether the loss should fall, by the failure of a bank, upon the administrator or upon an estate, the administrator having deposited $865.70 in the Corn Exchange bank of Waupun, in his own name and not to the credit of the estate. The circuit court held the administration personally responsible, and the Supreme Court affirmed the judgment. This is an important decision, and one which should be remembered by all persons having the settlement of the estates of deceased persons.

In the case of the Janesville Cotton Manufacturing company against Ford, the order was affirmed. This action seeks to determine the rights of all parties interested in the upper water power, and to regulate the manner of exercising such rights so that each owner may enjoy his own, and to that end it seeks to determine the quantity of water which each is entitled to draw, the relative rights of precedence of each in the use of the water, and to so regulate the mode of drawing the water that the highest available head shall be at all times maintained. The complaint asks that suitable apparatus be constructed for measuring the water, and that the water of each owner be measured and delivered to him by means of such apparatus in accordance with the decision as to the rights of the parties. The complaint was demurred to in the Circuit Court, and that court overruled the demurrer holding the complaint good, and the decision of the Supreme Court sustains this ruling.

The Weather.

REPORTED BY PRENTICE & EVENSON, DRUGGISTS.

The thermometer this morning at seven o'clock stood 47 degrees above zero, and at one o'clock at 44 degrees above. Raining most of the day. For the corresponding time last year the thermometer stood 75 and 81 degrees above.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 11, 1 a. m.—The following are the indications for to-day:

Upper lake region, rain, followed by clearing weather; winds mostly north-westerly, stationary or lower temperature, and higher pressure.

It acts directly upon the stomach, liver and kidneys in a remarkable manner. Zepora from Brazil, is only appreciated by those who have tried it. Every bottle warranted to cure Dyspepsia. Sold by Prentice & Evenson.
